Dulwich College International to operate in Pun Hlaing Golf Estate

SINGAPORE, 10 July 2015 – Yoma Strategic Holdings Ltd. (“Yoma Strategic”, together with its subsidiaries, the “Group”) and Education Index Management (“EIM”) are pleased to announce that the Group has agreed to handover the academic and operational management of Pun Hlaing International School (“PHIS”) including the Early Years Centre to Education Index Management (the owner of the Dulwich College International schools) with effect from 1 August 2015. Going forward, both international schools across Pun Hlaing and Star City will be overseen for academic and operational management by Dulwich College International with Dulwich College in London supporting as an educational adviser.

Mr Melvyn Pun, CEO Designate of Yoma Strategic said “We are delighted to expand our collaboration with EIM to have the opportunity to offer a high quality educational facility to the students at Pun Hlaing International School. We are confident that this will further cement Pun Hlaing Golf Estate’s status as a premier residential community in Yangon.”

Mr Christian Guertler, CEO of EIM added “We are committed to safeguarding the education of enrolled students and prospective students at PHIS. Good schools are the essential, soft infrastructure that help attract international companies and their executives to rapidly growing and new economies such as Myanmar’s. We are delighted to play our part in providing this with PHIS and our strategic partnership with Yoma Strategic Holdings.”

About EIM, Dulwich College International and Dulwich College (www.indulwich.com / www.dulwich.org.uk)

EIM is a company through which Dulwich College International and Dulwich College London will act as educational advisers in the development of a world-class, British international school, British College Yangon in Star City. EIM is the principal investor behind the establishment of the seven Dulwich Colleges in Asia, which are managed by Dulwich College Management International (collectively DCI) and established under a 100 year world charter with Dulwich College.

Dulwich College was founded in 1619 by Edward Alleyn, renowned Elizabethan and Jacobean actor. It is an academically selective boys' school in south London attracting boys from the top 15% of the UK academic range. It is one of the UK's most prestigious independent (private) schools and, has (through Dulwich College International) the largest overseas network of any British independent school with five international schools and two high school programmes in China, South Korea and Singapore.

Former pupils of the school, called Old Alleynians or International Old Alleynians, include many celebrated figures including explorer Sir Ernest Shackleton and writers such as PG Wodehouse, Raymond Chandler as well as, in our own day, Michael Ondaatje, the Oscar-nominated actor Chiwetel Ejiofor, and international best-seller crime novelist Tom Robb Smith whose first book Child 44 was released this year as a film directed by Sir Ridley Scott.

In this project, Dulwich College, acting through its dedicated international education company, will provide advice in relation to governance, curriculum and school policies, the appointment of the Head and other senior staff, facilities, organisation and structure of the school. The oversight by Dulwich College International will ensure that the same exceptional quality of education is provided from the outset at British College Yangon as in all of its international schools in Asia and that the school will benefit from its inclusion in the family of schools.
